

nowwhat

Nowwhat is a collective that manages and curates the website 'nowwhat.com.cy'. The aim of this team is to provide an accessible international online platform where people can show their artworks, a place open to discussions between people and artists involved, and to explore various digital mediums.

Their intention is to communicate common reflections with a critical eye through the medium of art, people, society, the environment, etc. This platform aspires to give impetus and space for dialogue between artists, participating artists and the public.

Posing the question 'nowwhat', the team launched their first project called 'σκιτάλη' (skitali) in an attempt to explore the prospects of an online digital platform.

Aggela Chimona (b. 1986) studied Fine art in the UK, acquiring a BA (Hons) in 2007 from the University of Wolverhampton and an MA in Sculpture in 2008 from University of the Arts London/ Wimbledon College. She co-founded nowwhat.com.cy in 2016 with Eleni Skoulia and Chrisanthy Christoforou.

Her research focuses on identity narratives, working mainly with video and sound, allowing her to process and edit material, reflecting the way the brain treats and processes memories. Chimona is interested in why people choose to narrate and present themselves the way they do often at the expense of truthfulness in story-telling.
